The George Hotel

29/30 High Street, Old Portsmouth

This famous, imposing old hotel was used by many top-level naval commanders over the centuries. Indeed, it was at the George that Vice Admiral Lord Nelson spent his final night ashore before setting sail to embark upon the Battle of Trafalgar in September 1805. The building in the photograph replaced a much smaller thatched inn and the premises also once traded as the Waggon & Lamb until the early 18th century. The George was also the terminus for the famed Rocket Stage Coach that operated between Portsmouth and London.

The proud history of the George came to an abrupt end in 1941 when the hotel suffered bomb damage by German aircraft. The premises was subsequently demolished.
